Camera Proves Welcome of Colonel Roosevelt In West as Anticipated by Cartoonist.

Colonel Roosevelt's journey through fourteen states has furnished photographers and cartoonists with many interesting subjects, and probably several thousand pictures have been taken of the former president or places that he visits, but none of them is more interesting than the reproductions above. Some days before Mr. Roosevelt reached the middle west Cartoonist McCutcheon of the Chicago Tribune offered the subscribers of his paper a cartoon depicting the anxiety of the people of lows for the coming of their distinguished visitor. The cartoon represented a typical town of the Hawkeye State with its population about the railway depot watching, while on telegraph poles and from the tops of freight cars other hundreds scanned the distant horizon for a sight of the traveler's train. When the special train bearing the visitors arrived in one of these towns a photographer of the American Press Association with the colonel's party was one of the first to alight for a snapshot of the crowd of welcome. Notice how like the cartoon of McCutcheon are the characters in the real photograph, even to the telegraph pole and the box cars.
